

Ivana Damjanovic is a Lecturer in Law at the University of Canberra and a Visiting Research Fellow at the Centre for European Studies of the Australian National University. Her research is interdisciplinary, encompassing issues of law and politics in international investment global regime, with particular focus on the European Union and its external investment, trade and climate change policies. She has been admitted as a legal practitioner in Australia. Ivana has taught law as a guest lecturer at universities in Asia (China, Bhutan) and Europe (Belgium, Croatia). Her professional background encompasses nine years as a career diplomat for Croatia with diplomatic postings in Europe and Australia, as well as research/policy roles for the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

Maria Garcia is an Associate Professor and Head of the Department of Politics, Languages and International Studies at the University of Bath in the UK. Her research focuses on the politics of trade agreement negotiations, geoeconomics competition in free trade agreements as well as societal aspects of trade agreements. She is one of the special advisors to the UK's Parliament's International Trade Committee. She is co-editor of the Handbook of EU and Trade Policy (2018, Edward Elgar) and co-editor of Latin America-EU Relations in the 21st Century (2022, MUP).

Elitsa Garnizova is the Director of the Trade Policy Hub at LSE Consulting, which provides specialised advisory services in the area of trade and investment policy. She has a PhD in international political economy from LSE. Her primary research interests include European trade and investment policy, European foreign policy, and international affairs. Elitsa holds an MA in European Studies: Transnational and Global Perspectives from KU Leuven, Belgium, and a BSc in International Economic and Management from Bocconi University, Italy. She is also a Director of Trade Experettes, a network highlighting the role of women in international trade.

David Henig is Director of ECIPE UK, and Director of the UK Trade Policy Project. A leading expert on the development of UK Trade Policy post Brexit, in 2017 he co-founded the UK Trade Forum, which brings together UK trade policy experts to debate and analyse these issues. After the UK referendum vote he helped establish the new Department for International Trade, engaging in many of the UK's first working groups with non-EU countries, and setting out options for engagement with the US. He is special advisor to the House of Lords Committee on International Agreements. David started his career before Government in consulting and business development, having graduated from Oxford University.

Ottavio Quirico is an Associate Professor at the Australian National University Centre for European Studies and University of New England. Inter alia, Dr Quirico has been Marie Curie Fellow at Université Panthéon-Assas and Max Weber Fellow at the European University Institute. He has lectured in universities worldwide, practised in Europe and acted as a consultant to the United Nations. His research covers international relations, with a focus on economic issues.

Emily Rees is a Senior Fellow at ECIPE (the European Centre for International Political Economy) and Managing Director at Trade Strategies, a trade and regulatory advisory consultancy. She comes from an extensive career in trade policy and economic diplomacy, having led Brazil's trade and investment agency relations with the European Union and served as Deputy Trade Attaché of France to Brazil. Her expertise lies at the intersection of trade, sustainability and agriculture. Her areas of interest include "new generation" trade issues including animal welfare, anti-microbial resistance, environmental food standards and values in trade. She also lectures regularly and her commentaries appear in European and Latin America media.

Kenneth Stiller is a PhD researcher at Nuffield College, University of Oxford. His research analyses the aggregation of trade-related preferences, the agency of trade blocs in international relations and the development of common foreign economic policies. He was Adam-von-Trott scholar at the University of Oxford, where he obtained a master's degree in International Relations, and holds a BA in Political Science and Economics from Mannheim University in Germany. He has also worked for the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, the German Federal Foreign Office and the United Nations Development Programme, a non-governmental environmental organisation as well as the Chilean institute for local and regional studies

Jean-Baptiste Vellut is an Associate Professor in American Studies at the Sorbonne Nouvelle University of Paris. His research focuses on state-market relations, trade policy and globalization debates in the United States. He is a Senior Associate at the London School of Economics Trade Policy Hub. He is also an external consultant on EU trade agreements for the Directorate General for Trade of the European Commission. One of his major works is the co-edited book entitled 'Understanding Mega Trade Deals: The Political and Economic Governance of New Cross-Regionalism' published by Routledge in 2017. He is also author of journal articles, law reports, book chapters, etc.

Ragnar Weilandt is a postdoctoral fellow at KUL Leuven and postdoc at KU Leuven and an adjunct professor at Vrije Universiteit Brussel. His research focusses on the EU's foreign policy towards its Southern neighbourhood as well as political, social and economic developments in the Mediterranean region. His non-academic writings have appeared in various media outlets including Politico Europe, The Guardian, Spiegel Online, Zeit Online, The Conversation and Poynter.

Yeo Lay Hwee is Director of the European Union Centre in Singapore. She is also Council Secretary at the Singapore Institute of International Affairs, among other many roles in Singapore, Australia and Europe. Her research interests revolve around comparative regionalism, multilateralism and governance networks. Adjunct Fellow at the S Rajaratnam School of International Studies, and Adjunct Faculty at the Singapore Management University. She sits on several Advisory Boards including Centre for European Studies at the Australian National University, KU Leuven's Master in European Studies Programme; Centre for Asia-Pacific Studies, Tallinn University of Technology, and the Leiden Asia Centre in Leiden University. She is also a member of the Scientific Committee of a multi-year research project on "Trends in Global Governance and Europe's Role" (TRIGGER) led by the Centre for European Policy Studies (CEPS) (<https://trigger-project.eu/>). She has written extensively on issues pertaining to Asia-Europe relations in general, and specifically on the ASEM process and EU-ASEAN relations. She participates actively in various research networks, policy dialogues and academic conferences.