Kate Fullagar will discuss the background, research, writing, and unusual methodology of her third monograph, Bennelong & Phillip (Simon & Schuster, 2023). This book offers a dual biography of Arthur Phillip (1738-1814), the inaugural governor of New South Wales, and of Bennelong (c1764-1813), the Wangal warrior who became Phillip's most important Indigenous point of contact. For a brief period Bennelong and Phillip were the most influential leaders of their respective communities during the critical period of contact. Bennelong journeyed with Phillip to London when the governor retired, staying three years. The book unravels their entwined stories by plotting them in reverse order, starting in the present and moving back from the men's deaths, their retirements, their last actions, their time together in London, then their time together in Sydney, their meeting, their back stories, their early lives and then their origins in blood and place.
